

Abstract

A method and system for authenticating a roaming device with a network is described. The roaming device initially is authenticated with an authentication server that sends authentication information to remote access points. When the roaming device enters in contact with one of the access points, a local authentication is performed between the access point and the roaming device to allow the device to access the network.